Pam Gets to Dig

“I think I’ll start a garden in the back yard,” Bud Smith tells his sister Pam. “It’s spring, and that’s when it’s best to plant things.”

“What fun!” thinks Pam, clapping her hands.
“May I help?” she asks Bud.

“No, no,” Bud tells Pam. “Girls are no help in a garden. Run away and play. I must get started.”

But Pam begs and begs. At last, Bud gives in. He will let her help, but just at first. “I’ll have to have ten sticks and a ball of string,” Bud tells his sister.

Pam jumps up, saying, “I’ll get the string. It’s in the kitchen.”
